After changing the variables from double to float for my program the runtimes were outputting 0.00000 this is because of the fact that the program is switching from the larger data type "Double" to the smaller data type "Float". This can cause implications due to the fact that float only has 4 bytes vs the 8 bytes of storage the double has. This may be what causes precision errors in the calculations the program runs.